

The undersampling objection has force against the predictor, and none against the result

"You did not measure a mechanism, you measured a small sample" is the cheapest way to dismiss a negative result, so it is answered here with measurements rather than prose. Two of the three panels come back PARTLY AGAINST this dissertation: the curves are still rising and the signal is real. The third is why that does not rescue the router.

